The President's Message

What's Up?

There you are, sipping your morning coffee and thumbing through the morning's mail. Bills, junk mail, store flyers, the normal stuff...but what's this? The Target! It sure looks different. What's going on? Just what are those NDSSA guys up to anyway? Just what has my State Association been doing for me?

These are good questions, so lets see if I can answer them for you. As you can see, the Target is different. After many years of hard work, Ed Jensen has retired as editor of the Target. It's a lot of work putting together this little magazine, and Ed did a really good job. Not only did he have to invest time and money, but he had to keep after guys like me who, well, know how to push a deadline! Ed is continuing as the Secretary/Treasurer of the Association. Thanks again, Ed!

Our new editor is Kevin Krogstad from Linton. Kevin volunteered for the job and we all need to give him a hand to make the Target as informational to our membership as we can. I urge the various discipline chairs, match directors and clubs to feel free to send Kevin info on what's happening in your local clubs. I know that there's a lot going on out there in the various disciplines that could be reported in the Target. This little magazine is what links all of the individual members in the various shooting disciplines together and the more we can make of it, the more it will solidify our State Association.

In January, during our annual meeting in Bismarck, we inducted two more members into the NDSSA Hall of Fame. Bill Murrey and Jim Kondelis are now in the member rolls. I recently had the opportunity to stop by the Jamestown Civic Center and looked at the NDSSA Hall of Fame "Shooting Stars". It's an excellent exhibit and I would urge any of you passing through Jamestown to stop in and have a look. The Shooting Stars are in the center hall leading into the arena on the south side of the building.

We have also been working on legislation this session, introducing Senate Bill 2340 in January. This bill limits the liability of a Manufacturer, Distributor or individual who legally sells a properly working firearm to someone. The seller can't be held liable for the illegal or improper use of the firearm by the person he sold it to; as long as it was sold in good faith and legally. The bill also states that a firearm cannot be deemed defective just because of its potential to cause harm. In other words, a gun is not defective just because it's a gun. We followed the bill through both the Senate and House Judiciary Committees. It was the first time I had testified to a Judiciary Committee. We met with little opposition. The bill came out of both Committees with a "do pass" recommendation and passed both the Senate and House, again with little opposition. It will soon cross the Governors desk, and I don't expect any trouble there. We also had the support of the North Dakota Wildlife Federation and the Casselton Wildlife Club among others at the Judiciary hearings. Hats off to my fellow NDSSA board members and all of their work with this. My part was small compared to theirs.

The NDSSA is partially funding two junior shooters this year who are representing North Dakota in the National JOHC Matches in Colorado Springs. Levi Geurts will be shooting Precision Air Rifle and Christopher Pueppke will be shooting Air Pistol. Good luck to both of you!

The Buffalo Sharpshooters 3-P Air Rifle team will be representing North Dakota at the Tom Lowe shooting facility in Atlanta, Georgia in June at the USA Shooting sponsored 3-P Air Rifle National Match. All but one of the team are shooting the NDSSA's Feinwerkbau P-70 Junior air rifles.

So there is just a bit of what's going on. There are a lot of folks out there putting in lots of time and effort to further the shooting sports. My sincere thanks to each and every one of you. Keep up the good work!

Good Shooting,
Eric

New Editor Takes Over

This is my first issue of the Target after taking the reins from Ed Jensen. It's getting out rather later than usual because of the confusion involved in passing the torch. I apologize, and will try to do better in the future.

By way of introducing myself, my name is Kevin Krogstad. I am a member of the Bismarck/Mandan Rifle & Pistol Association, and a Life Member of the NRA and NDSSA. Most of you probably don't know me yet, but I look forward to meeting more of you in the future.

You will probably notice that the Target is slimmed down a bit from past issues. Ed has set the bar pretty high; and I have not been able to accumulate the amount of material he found for each edition. Hopefully between my own research, and the contributions of other members (are you listening, people?) I can continue the tradition of excellence we have come to expect during Ed's tenure. My home mailing address and e-mail are listed on the masthead on page 2. Articles, pictures, schedules and match bulletins are always welcome. Please try to have them to me at least one month before the publication date. I use Microsoft Word 97, but I can convert from nearly any format.

Editorially Speaking

The Care and Feeding of Newbies

The shooters I have met in several states and around the world, courtesy of the internet, have been uniformly the nicest people one could ever hope to meet. Of course, we all knew that already. While that is a great benefit, it is also one of our biggest handicaps. It's all too easy to take it for granted, and get comfortable with the circle of friends and fellow shooters we have built up over the years. The problem with a circle is that it divides everyone "inside" from everyone "outside".

We work hard at recruiting new shooters through youth shooting programs. Yet, we can't seem to get our membership up to where we want it. Youth programs are vital to the future of our sport. However, we must take care not to lose sight of other opportunities in our focus on youth programs.

Most youth shooters don't continue shooting past high school. True, they are inclined to be more friendly to the shooting sports, and may get back into shooting eventually, but we lose a lot of them when they discover the opposite sex and get busy with college life. Something has to go, and shooting usually ends up in the closet.

There is another reservoir of potential shooters that I don't believe we are tapping effectively. A large percentage of our youth give up most of their hobbies when they get into college. After college, they get married, raise a family, start a career, establish a home, and find a place in the community. For several years, life keeps them busy. When the children are old enough to become somewhat self-sufficient, the career is no longer new, and weight starts to migrate to the middle, these people start looking for something to do. This phenomenon is what supports bowling leagues, softball leagues, and golf courses. These people are powerful friends, or dangerous enemies. They vote, and they talk politics with their friends. We want them on our side.

We can get these people into shooting. They have the patience to work at it; they can afford the equipment; and they want to be a part of something. They have kids that could be involved in junior programs. The only thing that will keep them playing softball or golf instead of shooting is if they feel like 'outsiders' when they come into contact with us.

Nobody is being rude to them. Shooters are nice people, and try to make new shooters feel welcome. The problem is that many of us have forgotten what it feels like to be a new shooter. A while ago, a well-known highpower competitor posted on one of the internet forums, rather disgusted with his performance for shooting a 198 in "200 conditions". This shooter is certainly capable of shooting perfect scores, and has done so frequently, so perhaps he was justifiably disappointed in his own performance. I wondered, though, "what would that sound like to a new shooter who was proud of his 145, for whom a 180 would be a 'once-in-a-lifetime' score?" Most shooters will never be able to afford world-class equipment. Most will never shoot a "clean". They can all learn from the High Masters, but only if they feel comfortable talking to them.

Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is this: this season, shoot a competition in a discipline you have never shot before. If you're a pistol shooter, shoot a Garand match. If you're a highpower shooter, shoot a bullseye pistol match. If you shoot both pistol and rifle, shoot a skeet match, or an archery match. Preferably, go by yourself and compete at a club where you don't know anyone. The point is, shoot a match among people much more familiar with the sport, where your chances of shooting a competitive score are low. Pay attention to the way you feel and the impressions you get of the other competitors. Since you know how competitions work, you won't get the full impact; but you will get a small sample of what new shooters are faced with.

Now, invite a new shooter to a match or league night at your club. Work on making him feel welcome and involved. Offer to line up equipment for him to try, help him with technique, and help him learn. Shooting is fun. Sometimes we lose sight of that. We forget how intimidating it is for a beginner to watch somebody with thousands of dollars worth of equipment shooting impossibly high scores.

"The great body of our citizens shoot less as time goes on. We should encourage rifle practice among schoolboys, and indeed among all classes, as well as in the military services by every means in our power. Thus, and not otherwise, may we be able to assist in preserving peace in the world... The first step -- in the direction of preparation to avert war if possible, and to be fit for war if it should come -- is to teach men to shoot!"

North Dakota Open Air Rifle State Championship Report

by Rick Jorgenson

This is the second year in a row that our State Champion is a junior shooter. Congratulations, Levi!! We also wish you the best of luck at the Junior Olympic National Air Rifle Championships at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs at the end of this month.

It is great to see the interest in air rifle competition grow to the point where we can have 13 to 14 shooters on the line, shoulder to shoulder. This is the type of competition atmosphere that makes the match both memorable and challenging. It is also good preparation for competition out of state at Colorado Springs or Atlanta.

It is also great to see three new competition air rifles in North Dakota. They served their owners well, with 1st, 2nd and 3rd place finishes in Marksman class.

Thanks to all of you for a great match. Thanks to everyone for all the help with setup and teardown of the range. Finally, THANKS to Tina's mom for the cookies. We all enjoyed them!

Until next time, hold center and shoot one 10 at a time.

"If I knew what you've made during the year, if I know what your withholding is, if I know what your spending pattern is, I should be able to generate for you a tax return. I am an excellent advocate of return-free filing. We know everything about you that we need to know. Your employer tells us everything about you that we need to know. Your activity records on your credit cards tell us everything about you that we need to know. Through interface with Social Security, with the DMV, with your banking institutions, we really have a lot of information ... We could literally file a return for you. Guns Not the Cause Of School Violence, Says Education Secretary...

Appearing on several news programs on Sunday, March 11, U.S. Secretary of Education Rod Paige addressed the recent shootings at a suburban San Diego high school and stressed that "Probably the biggest problem we have is the amount of alienation and rage in our young people." Confronting that situation rather than passing more gun laws should be the country's focus, Paige told CBS's Face the Nation. Paige told CNN's Late Edition that "focusing on guns is much too narrow, it's beyond guns...they're not the cause of the violence." Paige highlighted the Bush administration's approach for more after-school programs, more parental involvement and expanded character education in the nation's schools. "Character education offers an opportunity to teach kids things like empathy, compassion, tolerance...all values that we all know are wonderful," Paige said. In his address to Congress last month, President Bush spoke of tripling the funding for character education "to teach our children not only reading and writing, but right from wrong."

Dorgan & Conrad Earn a Cautious "Attaboy"

by Kevin Krogstad

In the face of determined opposition from the left, John Ashcroft was recently approved as Attorney General of the United States. 42 Democrat Senators (including both of South Dakota's) voted against his confirmation, basically because he had vowed to fairly enforce the laws of our nation without preference. Our own usually leftist Senators were among the very few Democrats courageous enough to cast a vote for decency and fairness.

Since I have always been willing to point out the numerous times Conrad and Dorgan have voted against us, I thought it was only fair to congratulate them on a job well done in this case. Whether Mr. Ashcroft lives up to his promises remains to be seen, but we are all aware of the blemish left on our nation's history by his predecessor. He can hardly do worse.

I don't suppose there is any hope that this vote signals a new era of our Senators voting in accordance with the people of North Dakota, but maybe if they get positive feedback every time it happens...

The Target- Online!

Starting with this issue, The Target will be available on the NDSSA website (<http://www.ndssa.org/>) in PDF format. For now, the online version will be simply an electronic copy of the print newsletter, as this issue is late enough already.

In the near future, I hope to move from PDF format to a fully interactive online publication with e-mail links and more photos than can be accommodated in the print version.
